Course Description

The purpose of this seminar is to familiarize students with the political instrument at the heart of representative democracy – the political party. We begin with the premise that most observant participants in democratic political systems have some idea about the role and functioning of the political party. But beyond this working knowledge of parties as election-time competitors, how much does one know about this political actor? What differentiates a party from other social groups? What are the different motivations for party formation? Why do certain parties emerge “naturally”, whereas other preference groups find party formation and success difficult? From this starting point, we will explore the historical development of parties and their role in agenda-setting, policy making and institution building in democracies around the world. Our discussions will raise questions about the influence of sociological, economic and institutional factors in shaping party organization, the policy and issue positions they advocate and their interaction in the political arena. We will also examine the recent changes in party structures and party systems to decide whether these developments signify a transformation in party politics.

In this seminar, we will be reading the seminal texts and theories on parties and party systems. Through the readings and in-class discussions, we will be applying these theories to contemporary party examples in democracies around the world, including the United States and countries in Western and Eastern Europe and Africa. By the end of the semester, students will have arrived at their own informed conclusions as to why, for instance, party politics in the United Kingdom is beginning to resemble that seen in India, how third parties, such as the US Green Party, have been successful without gaining office, and how the strategies of liberal parties can be linked to the rise of right-wing nationalist parties.

Requirements

This advanced seminar is open to those students who have already taken other comparative or American political science courses, or by permission of the instructor. However, no prior coursework on party politics or political systems is required to take this course.

Informed participation in class: Students are expected to attend and participate in all class meetings. This seminar places an emphasis on discussion and debate, and thus, active participation is essential and expected. Many of the readings are challenging, and therefore, students should carefully read and take notes on the readings prior to attending class.

Because concentration and group connection is needed for successful discussion, laptops and other electronic devices will not be permitted to be used in the classroom.

Two 5-7 Page Papers: Students will be asked to respond to a specific question about the various themes of the course. No outside research should be undertaken for these assignments. However, students are encouraged to think critically about the theories in light of the case studies presented in class.

Barring extraordinary circumstances, late papers will be marked down a third of a grade (for ex. A to A-) for each 24 hour period after they are due. Thus, if a paper is turned in any time during the first 24 hours after it is due, it is penalized a third of a grade. Any paper not turned in within a week of the assigned due date will automatically receive a zero.

Final Exam: A cumulative final exam will be administered during exam period.

According to the Registrar's website

(<http://www.rochester.edu/registrar/assets/pdf/FinalExams-Spring2018.pdf>), the exam is currently scheduled for Thursday, May 10 at 4pm. Given that the Registrar's schedule is still tentative, do not arrange to leave town before the end of final exam period.

For Students pursuing the "W" Option, there is an additional requirement.

Fifteen page Research Paper: Students should write a well-documented and researched paper on a topic of their choice within the field of party politics, using the theoretical frameworks we have discussed in the course. A review of secondary literature is not sufficient; students should draw on primary resources (surveys, newspapers, etc.). The paper is due May 1 by noon. Students taking the W option are required to submit a detailed 1 page outline of their research projects in class on March 20 and meet with me during that week to discuss their proposed paper topics. The first draft of the paper is due April 20 by 3pm to my office.

Failure to satisfactorily meet either the outline or draft deadline can result in removal from the W section.

Grading for the course will be determined as follows:

For 253 Students:

Participation:	20%
2 5-7 page papers:	40% total
Final Exam:	40%

For 253W Students:

Participation:	20%
2 5-7 page papers:	30% total
Final Exam	25%
13-15 page research paper:	25%

Academic Honesty Policy

All assignments and activities associated with this course must be performed in accordance with the University of Rochester's Academic Honesty Policy. More information is available at: www.rochester.edu/college/honesty.

In this course, the following additional requirements are in effect:

You are encouraged to discuss course readings with your fellow students. However, all written work must be done independently and not in collaboration with another. I encourage you to consult with me and with the College Writing Center for help with your papers.

Readings

In this course, we will read mainly book chapters and journal articles. Journal articles and chapters in edited volumes are available on-line through Blackboard.

The books listed below are available for purchase from the Bookstore. A copy of each book is also on reserve at Rush Rhees Library.

Downs, Anthony. An Economic Theory of Democracy. New York: Harper and Brothers, 1957.

Part I. Foundations: Function and Form

What is a party? What differentiates it from other political actors, such as social movements and interest groups? What are the advantages and the limitations of the definitions offered by different theories? What are the implications of these different conceptions for party interaction?

Week One: Introduction and Theoretical Foundations (23 Jan.)

Downs, Anthony. An Economic Theory of Democracy. New York: Harper and Brothers, 1957. Chapter 2.

Schlesinger, J. "On the Theory of Party Organization." Journal of Politics. 46.2 (1984): 369-400.

Marx, Karl and Friedrich Engels. The Communist Manifesto. Oxford: Oxford UP, 1998 (1888).

Part II. Party Origins: Theories and Applications

How and why do parties come about? Are some types of parties more "natural" than others? Do we see a change in the reasons behind party formation or are the roots of modern parties firmly established in the past? Are Western theories of party formation valid across non-Western cases? How do we rectify recently emerged parties with the claims of older theories? How are the issue preferences behind party formation manifested in different countries?

Week Two: Theories of Party Formation (30 Jan.)

Lipset, Seymour and Stein Rokkan. "Cleavage Structures, Party Systems, and Voter Alignments: An Introduction." In Peter Mair (ed) The West European Party System. Oxford: Oxford UP, 1990. 91-138.

No class, March 6: 1st Paper due

No class, March 13: SPRING BREAK

Part III: Structure and Constraints of the Party System

On what basis are party systems classified? What factors, in addition to social cleavages, affect the structure (number, competitiveness) of the party system? How does the organization of the party system affect the prospects for party success?

Week Six: Competing Models of Parties and Party Systems: Their Causes and Outcomes (20 Mar.)

For W students, one page research paper outline due. Individual meetings to discuss research paper topic this week.

V. Recent Developments: Temporary Shifts or a True Transformation?

Do recent claims about changes in party systems and party organizations signify temporary shifts or the rearrangement of party politics? Are these trends restricted to advanced industrial democracies or are they occurring in other regions? What are the ramifications of a possible partisan dealignment for the health of democracies? Does party professionalization spell the end of representative political systems? Do empirical facts support these theoretical conclusions?
