The Middle East (Al Qaeda, Iraq) and Southwest Asia (Iran, Afghanistan, Pakistan) have been the source of 21st century America's most difficult political, military, and security problems. This course will investigate the causes, nature, and conduct of these conflicts and wars, with a particular focus on the Wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, intensively studying who fights, why they fight, and how they fight. In doing so it will address important theoretical and practical questions about the nature of warfare, terrorism and intelligence in 21st century warfare. More broadly, it will address questions of the relationship between violence, culture, and politics in the globalized era, and the relationships between politics, development, diplomacy, and the use of force in modern politics.

Goals

The presentation of this course, and the evaluation of students’ efforts in it, will be tailored to the following aims:

- Students will gain an understanding of the American experience of war and conflict during the first decade of the 21st century, with a focus on decisions to use force and the challenges associated with using force.
- Students will acquire an understanding of the politics of Iraq and Afghanistan, and the effects of the American invasion and occupation of these countries.
- Students will develop their powers of political and social analysis, with an emphasis on logical argument and the effective use of evidence in drawing conclusions.
- Students will develop their faculties in writing and speaking about politics and political phenomena.

Please note that none of these goals involve the advancement of anyone's political or policy opinions (including those of the instructor). We will be discussing and analyzing contentious and, at times, upsetting situations. While our personal views necessarily shape how we think, the demands of clear-eyed analysis and, no less important, civility, demand that we leave political agendas at the door.

Course Design

This course involves a combination of class seminars, directed readings, papers, a final exam, and opportunities for informal discussion during office hours. Each part serves a purpose, be it information transmission and retention, promoting rigorous analysis, or encouraging the development of new ideas. Failing to engage with all parts will diminish the return on your efforts. For this reason, pre-class preparation is essential for this course. Students are expected to have read and considered the assigned material prior to the course, and be prepared to discuss it in class. Please remember that that the material of the course is delivered in both texts and in-class discussion, which means that the texts contain valuable ideas and information which may not be specifically addressed in class, and discussions and lectures will go beyond the readings. You are responsible for understanding both, so please be sure to raise questions about things you are unsure about.
Readings:

The following books should be purchased:

And one of the following:
N. Fick, One Bullet Away; OR A. Exum, This Man’s Army; OR C. Mullaney, The Unforgiving Minute

Beyond these readings, texts are available electronically via the Blackboard site. Note that there may some changes in assigned readings as the course develops; the nature of the topic demands a certain flexibility. You will be notified with ample time.

Assignments

Midterm: 20%; 20 October
Includes essays and specific tests of knowledge; a study guide will be distributed one week before.

Simulation: 5% preparation paper (Due 25 October), 10% participation
Between 1-5 November we will conduct a simulation of the conflict in Afghanistan. Each student will have a ‘role’ to play; assignments will be handed out in early October. The preparation paper (no more than 2 pages) will describe the resources, capabilities, interests, and attitudes of the role.

Participation—10%
Your active participation in class is necessary if this class is to be a successful learning experience. This means you must come in having read the assignments and join in the class-room discussion of them, making evident that you have read and thought about them. You should expect to make at least one comment every week or so. While attendance is not graded as such, excessive truancy can affect this grade, since you are unable to participate when absent. *Excused absences, regardless of duration, will not affect this grade. Incivility toward fellow students during seminar can negatively affect this grade.

Final Paper, 8 Pages, Due 1 December—25%
Students will write on a topic of relevance to the class. Topics must be submitted to instructor by 10 November.

Final Exam—25%; Friday, 17 December, 19:15 (7:15 PM)
Includes essays and specific tests of knowledge; a study guide will be distributed one week before.
Assignments are to be turned in by class time on the day they are due. They should be in hardcopy unless unforeseen circumstances prevent printing them in or handing them in in a timely manner. For every 24 hours that pass thereafter, 5% of credit is lost, to a maximum of 40% lost.

Exams are to be sat at the date and time specified, unless prior approval has been given or a doctor's excuse is submitted at the next attended class meeting. Exams should be sat within 1 week of the general administration of the exam.

Grades
Grades are assigned to both individual pieces of work and cumulatively. The grade scale I use for both is below (note that “g” refers to the numerical grade you receive). I do not usually curve grades, but reserve the right to do so if I deem it necessary. All material is graded on its own terms, rather than through comparison with other students’ work. For the cumulative grades, I do not round: what you get is what you get.

Cheating and plagiarism are, of course, unacceptable in academic work, and when suspected will be pursued through the appropriate university channels. Proper citations and standards of integrity are not optional. If you have questions about what this means, please ask the instructor.

Changes to the Syllabus:
In the event that there is a need for there to be any changes to the syllabus, an e-mail will be sent to all students’ e-mail accounts (as maintained by the registrar), and will be mentioned in class at two class meetings. Changes become effective immediately after their second mention in class, or the sending of the e-mail, whichever comes last.

Cancellation of Class: In the event that the instructor needs to cancel class, an e-mail will be sent to all students’ e-mail accounts (as maintained by the registrar) prior to class time.
